

Type of game: RPG, Fantasy.

Set in: Japan, 2060.

Threat: Alien Invasion.

It began in the morning of June 28th. The sky in Tokyo began to crumble, it was upset with heavy, dark storms forming. Lightning and thunder crashing. The sky began to form a rift, to break apart. The darkness loomed over the city.

From the rift, a winged, crimson creature began to appear. It crashed into the earth, like a lifeless body, followed by other smaller creatures.

Buildings were destroyed and crumbled into pieces as they fell apart.

Defence units were rushed immediately onto site by the Captain, evacuating anyone around the area. Nobody was allowed to stay or approach the creatures.

The creatures began to emit a toxic gas around them. Later it was found out that it was hard to breathe near them and you struggled if you tried.

Chaos was spread throughout the city. The creatures roamed and attacked anyone on sight. Another unit of Defence Forces were sent in, armed with weapons and protective gear to try and fight off the invasion. All the high rankers were tasked to simply stay alive.

Threat was marked as an alien invasion, 'extremely dangerous, evacuate immediately'.

After hours of gunfire and explosions, evacuation and death, the winged creature finally gave signs of life. The ground shook as it stood up and roared. Extending its wings, it sprung itself into the air and flew across the city, joining in with the chaos. Breathing fire and destroying buildings, resulting in hundreds more dead.

By the next day, June 29th, the entire city of Tokyo, was taken over. Most of the buildings were destroyed and thousands of people were dead. Fire was burning on the leftover buildings and bodies, leaving ashes behind.

The Japanese government was planning an emergency evacuation from the neighbouring cities. Planning to attack Tokyo and take back their city before their secret lab was revealed. They knew these creatures were here before but they couldn't let the public know.

More new creatures were seen from afar, falling out of the rift. Tokyo was now being populated by alien creatures, rushing to the outskirts. What was left of the defence forces, retreated to safety. Weapons were dropped behind in a hurry.

Within a few days the surrounding cities of Tokyo were taken over by the alien creatures as well and the defence forces were trying their best to keep them back from going any further. These cities were Saitama, Yamanashi, Kanagawa and Chiba. All five cities were marked as hostile and nobody was allowed to approach the borders as the Defence Forces had reinforced them as best as they could.

The Japanese government later agreed to send air reinforcements into the cities to drop down bombs to eliminate most of the dangerous enemies. More weapons were sent for land forces around the borders after shelters were set up for the forces, including medical tents, temporary shelters, and a dining area further away.

The air reinforcements didn't last long as they were wiped out by the winged-fire creatures. The aircrafts themselves were ripped apart and exploded after impacting with the ground. Many casualties have happened since the opening of the rift.

Rin, the main character, is a Captain at the Defence Forces. When the rift opened, he assigned his forces to evacuate everyone nearby and fight back the alien creatures and reinforce the borders so that no casualties would happen outside of Tokyo. But this wasn't met as further cities were taken over by the alien creatures.

After Rin had arrived, the five cities, including Tokyo, were overrun by hostiles and at that point, the Defence Forces were struggling to keep the aliens from further spreading out. Inside those cities, it was near impossible to survive. Nobody was or could be rescued but Rin wanted to do his best and save as many lives as possible if anyone was still fighting.

Among the destruction, there was a bunker door exposed. It was further into the city where the aliens had taken place. It caught Rin's eye and he needed to see what it was, he needed to investigate further and when he did, he managed to get inside while his team kept him alive and safe from all the creatures. Inside he knew it was a laboratory, one that was kept secret for many years, and there someone stood, a man in his late 30s or 40s. A scientist who was having a closer look at one of the creature's deceased bodies, examining it thoroughly.

Mizumi, the scientist, became friends with Rin after the alien invasion had broken out. 10 years before, Mizumi was an incredibly successful scientist and was applying for his dream job under the government. Mizumi thought the interview went well until he was suddenly tranquilised and taken away to a facility in Tokyo, where he awoke to a giant laboratory.

He was being interviewed to see if his skills were up to the task of researching an alien species that the government had found detained. At first, Mizumi was shocked and terrified but after hearing the government's reasons for this and his tasks, he was relieved and thrilled.

For 10 years, Mizumi had been kept hidden away from the outside world to make sure secrets wouldn't slip as he researched this alien race and had found many new discoveries about them including their weaknesses and how humanity could fight them.
